

To whom it may concern

27th May 2010

A picture says 1000 words – when it comes to a web site quality, professional and well thought out photography is a must to give any web site that extra edge, the edge to make people stay on the site, the edge to say the products and services are quality, the edge to help convert a web visitor to a client.

At Truska we produce a large number of web sites every year and our strength is in making them work, good navigation, easy to find what you need and being clear and uncluttered.

On a number of recent projects we have used Margaret O'Hare of Fine Art Imaging to do the commercial photography for the site and the results have been no less than outstanding. Her thought and carefully preparation, her attention to detail and to message and her undeniable passion and enthusiasm to deliver the best images, glows through in the final product.

I would have absolutely no hesitation in recommending Margaret to anyone looking for commercial photography whether for a web site, brochure or other marketing products, you will not be disappointed.

Yours faithfully
